TOKYO FOCAL POINT OF LONG-DISTANCE AIRPLANE FLIGHTS

Fliers Converge On Japanese City In Thrilling Trips

TOKYO, Aug. 6.—The capital of the flowery kingdom became the focal point of aviation interest today as three long-distance aviators brought their planes down on local airports after difficult flights while Japanese authorities made preparations to receive Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh at the end of their leisurely vacation jaunt through the sub-Arctic regions.

Hugh Herndon, Jr., and Clyde Pangborn, American airmen who failed in their efforts to set a new round the world record only to lay immediate plans for a non-stop flight from Tokyo to Seattle, arrived here from Kharbarovsk, Siberia.

A short while before, Miss Amy Johnson, daring British aviator, had landed in her puss moth plane after a speedy flight from London. The convergence of the three ventures gave Tokyo aeronautical authorities one of their busiest days in history. Huge crowds were on hand to greet the arriving fliers, and hundreds of the visitors took occasion to pelt air officials with questions concerning news of the Lindbergh trip.

The intense interest evidenced in the flight of the "lone eagle" and his wife over the sub-Arctic Canadian wastes gave eloquent indications of the reception they will be accorded upon their arrival.

Miss Johnson, fresh and untired despite her arduous journey, landed at the Tachikawa airport from Okayama, near Kobe, at 5:17 p. m. (3:17 a. m. Columbus time.)

Thirty-three minutes later Herndon and Pangborn landed at the Haneda Airfield, where they descended to the Tachikawa field, where they descended at 6:16 p. m. (4:16 a. m. E. S. T.) to receive a great ovation from the crowd that only a little while before had vociferously signed its appreciation of Miss Johnson's daring flight.

Herndon and Pangborn had been held up for days at Kharbarovsk by bad weather. When they perceived it would be impossible to break the speed record established by Wiley Post and Harold Gatty, they announced that they had abandoned the attempt, but would continue on around the world, at-

CONTINUE DRAIN ON GOLD RESOURCES OF BANK OF ENGLAND

Wild Rumors Spread
Over London; May
Need More Gold

LONDON, Aug. 6.—Despite strenuous efforts by British financial authorities to stem the outward flow of gold, the drain upon the resources of the bank of England continued today.

It was understood that an additional $10,000,000 of the precious metal had been sold within the last few hours, probably to France or Holland, the sale followed a mysterious and erratic flurry in the pound sterling and an unexpected break in the leading gold exchanges.

At the opening of the market, the pound sterling strengthened somewhat after all principal exchanges had slumped below the gold export point, and predictions that further shipments of gold from this country might become necessary were heard freely.

During the last twenty-four hours, the leading authorities of Throgmorton street have spent much of their time in denying and dispelling a crop of wild rumors, some of which were held responsible for the mysterious weakness in the exchange.

One of these rumors, found to be absolutely without foundation, hinted that a batch of some sort had developed in the $50,000,000 credit extended to the Bank of England by the Bank of France and the Federal Reserve Bank of New York.

Elmuthaneously, rumors spread throughout Europe that a number of British banks were on the verge of insolvency. Every assurance was given that leading British banks are as strong as ever, and a member of the board of the bank of England stated that no batch whatever had developed in the Franco-American credit extension.

He added that the bank of England had not yet found it necessary to make use of one penny of the credit.

The financial editor of the London Daily Herald laid the fall of the pound sterling to "panic sellers" while other writers charged that the baseless rumors all originated in Paris, indicating "the unbalanced state of mind of many French financiers and investors."

Trading was dull on the stock exchange during the early hours.

EDISON IMPROVES BUT SERIOUSLY ILL

WEST ORANGE, N. J., Aug. 6.—Thomas A. Edison was maintaining improvement in his battle for health today but is still not out of danger, his physicians said.

Uremic poisoning, diabetes and a stomach disorder still bothered the aged inventor, Dr. Hubert S. Howe said today. He compared his patient to an elevator, which functions perfectly but with frayed cables. He said he believed Mr. Edison has a long time to live yet; however.

Mr. Edison took a motor ride again Wednesday afternoon.

WIFE FACES CHARGE IN HUSBAND'S DEATH

ZANESVILLE, O., Aug. 6.—Declarer she shot in self defense, Mrs. Mary Turner, 54, today faced second degree murder charges in the death of her husband, Turp Turner, 55.

Armed with a gas pipe, her husband pursued her to an upstairs room during a quarrel and threatened her, she was said to have told police.

Seizing a shot gun, she fatally wounded him as he stood on the stairs, police said she confessed.

Turner died in the Bethany Hospital and his wife was in the county jail awaiting trial.

AKRON PREPARES TO CHRISTEN NEW NAVY AIRSHIP SATURDAY

"First Lady" Will Do
Ceremony For Huge
Sky Monster

AKRON, O., Aug. 6.—Lacking only the cooling breezes from across the sea, Akron, 500 miles from the nearest coast, today took on many of the aspects of a seaport with the christening of the navy's new sky monster, the U. S. S. Akron.

White middled sailors were a familiar sight as the city bedecked itself with red, white and blue bunting and prepared to welcome Mrs. Herbert Hoover, First Lady, formally will christen the largest zeppelin the world has ever known. They were members of the airship's crew.

Today the great cigar-shaped battleship of the air was recognized by the navy simply as ZRS-4, its technical designation, it will be cut loose from its mooring and launched formally on Saturday as the first lady of the land releases a flock of racing pigeons and intones: "I christen thee U. S. S. Akron."

The time-honored ceremony of breaking a bottle of champagne, or in later years, a bottle of ginger ale, across the nose of a new ship will have no place in christening of the 6,500,000 cubic-foot dirigible. Instead, a flock of forty-eight racing pigeons will be placed in a hatch halfway between the dirigible's nose and the underhanging control car. At a given signal, Mrs. Hoover will pull a cord attached to the hatchway and release the pigeons.

The matter of finding suitable pigeons for the occasion caused those in charge of the ceremonies no little concern. They first considered the ordinary variety of homing pigeons, but learned that the "get-away" of that breed was not all that could be desired.

Being homing pigeons, the flock could be relied upon to head for home, but just how long they might delay the start for a look around the mammoth hanger housing the dirigible, no one cared to predict. So the beautiful white homing pigeons were rejected and more homely, but also more dependable racers were substituted.

When word leaked out that the dignified officials were having difficulties with their pigeons, it seemed that every pigeon owner within a radius of hundreds of miles volunteered the services of his bird. Forty-eight were accepted.

Officials of the Goodyear-Zeppelin Corporation, builders of the craft, who will retain its custody even after christening until after the tests scheduled for week after next, asked that the public be definitely informed that the Akron will not be flown at the christening. It will not leave the hanger.

At the offices of the Greenland government here today it was said that Cramer some time ago deposited $1,000 to cover costs of a landing in Greenland. With Bert Hassel, Cramer attempted a trans-Atlantic flight via Greenland in 1928. Their plane cracked up in the interior of Greenland and searching parties were sent to find the flyers and bring them to safety.

CLEVELAND, Aug. 6.—Parker Cramer, American aviator, who landed unheralded on the east coast of Greenland, near Angmagssalik, yesterday, was engaged in an attempt to chart an airmail route to Europe, via Canada, Greenland, Iceland, the Faeroe Islands and Denmark, officials of the transportation airlines corporation stated here today.

The aviator took off from Detroit July 28 on the flight over the north Atlantic, of the Trans-American Concern, backers of the flight, stated. He was accompanied by a radio expert, Oliver Paquette, who was loaned to the company for the flight by the Canadian government.

Announcements of the scheduled flight were withheld by the Trans-American Corporation.

"We tried to keep it from being publicized as spectacular," Mark E. Nevilis, public relations director of the concern said.

Cramer was flying in a cabin monoplane powered by a single motor. After taking off from Detroit, nothing more was heard from him by his backers until a dispatch was received at Copenhagen announcing his arrival at Greenland.

The present flight is Cramer's third attempt to chart an airmail route over the Atlantic. In 1928, Cramer with Bert Hassel attempted to fly from Rockford, Ill., to Scandinavia but was forced down in Greenland. He and his companions were lost for two weeks before being found by a rescue party.

Cramer also was a member of the crew of the "Untin Bowler" which also failed to complete a flight from Illinois to northern Europe in 1929.

Officials of the Transamerican Line, a subsidiary of the Thompson Aeronautical Corporation, stated that the plan to chart the airmail route had not been authorized by the government but that the attempt was made to determine the feasibility of the project.

From Greenland, Cramer will attempt to fly his plane across Iceland and the Faeroe Islands to Copenhagen, Denmark. The route is considered one of the most dangerous bits of flying country in the northern hemisphere.

That he was able to arrive at Angmagssalik without attracting notice was credited to the wild nature of the country over which he flew on his first hop, and the concentration of public interest in other world flights.

Cramer is a native of Clarion, Pa., where his mother is now living. He is about 35 years of age and a few years ago was an inspector in the aviation division of the department of commerce at Washington, D. C., according to records at the office of the National Air Pilots Association.

PLAN ENFORCEMENT OF AUTO LIGHT LAWS

Police have been instructed to strictly enforce all ordinances relating to lights on motor vehicles, to stop all drivers whose cars are not properly equipped with lights and to ticket them for appearance at police headquarters if the wiring or the lights are defective and show negligence upon the part of the owner. If light bulbs are discovered to be burned out, however, the drivers will receive an opportunity to replace the bulbs instead of being handed a ticket.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the body pink, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, laxative and chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement won't get at the cause of your trouble. Your liver is the real trouble, and the real feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Constipation is your enemy. You have a thick, bad taste, and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blisters. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is palsied.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel like a new person. You have a clear, thin, healthy vegetable extract remaining when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for Liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resist a substitute. © 1931, Carter Medicine Company.

ted, however, that they would get away sooner than if possible, banking on the 5,400 mile cruising radius of their plane to take them safely across the wide ocean regardless of weather conditions.

The American airmen said they would make a definite decision concerning the Tokyo-Seattle hop after taking a few days' rest. The Japanese newspaper Asahi has offered a prize of $25,000 for the first successful non-stop jump across the Pacific. The city of Seattle has posted a similar award which already has accumulated interest of $3,000.

Miss Johnson, who was accompanied on her flight by C. C. Humphries, a British pilot, said she would return to London in about ten days, probably flying back over the same route she followed on the eastward journey.

AKLAVIK, Northwest Territory, Aug. 6.—Having completed nearly half of their 7,000 mile flight to Japan, Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh were in high hopes today of robbing onward to Point Barrow of Nome.

Bad weather threatened to hold them in this "metropolis of the Arctic," however. Rain and fog were reported generally over Alaska.

"We'll have to wait for the breaks," the flying colonel announced after listening to weather reports brought in by radio from various Alaskan points and ships at sea.

When the Lindberghs do take off from Aklavik, they may decide to make the 1,100 mile hop to Nome direct, instead of stopping at Point Barrow, which is designated as "The Hope of the World."

This change in schedule will probably be necessary because the U. S. Coast Guard cutter, Northland, laden with gasoline for refueling the vacation flyers' Ampliabiplane, is held up by ice and fog near Icy Cape, 150 miles southwest of Point Barrow.

It is possible that the Lindberghs would land on the Arctic Ocean near the Northland to refuel. The sea about the ship was reported calm. Bringing down a plane in the ice-choked water might prove extremely hazardous, however.

TOKYO, Aug. 6.—The round-the-world monoplane Miss Veedol of Hugh Herndon, Jr., and Clyde Pangborn came down at Haneda airport here at 5:50 p. m. today (4:50 a. m., E. D. T.) after a few minutes after the arrival of Miss Amy Johnson from England in the Amy Moth plane. The Englishwoman landed at 5:17 after a flight from Okayama. She left Seoul, Korea, yesterday.

The Miss Veedol made the flight across Manchuria from Khabarovsk, Siberia, where the flyers had been held up for several days by bad weather.

Miss Johnson, who was accompanied by a mechanic, C. C. Humphries, landed at Tachikawa airport.

BAHIA, Brazil, Aug. 6.—The German seaplane DO-X which left Bahia at 4:45 a. m. E. S. T. today for Natal, flew over Macae, approximately 300 miles north of Bahia, at 7:45 a. m. E. S. T.

low the stern, the dirigible will be cut loose from its mooring and will be held down with ropes by a ground crew.

As she christens it the U. S. S. Akron, the ground crew will allow the ship to rise a few feet and will also move it forward a bit. That will be the first time the Akron has floated through the air, and it will be enough to satisfy the launching traditions of the navy.

A large section of the fabric covering will be left off near the stern to expose a section of the crew's quarters, an airplane compartment and other mysteries of the interior, to the 100,000 persons expected to be on hand.

A novel feature of the christening ceremony will be the direction of traffic for the first time from the air. A small blimp fitted out with loudspeaker equipment will hover low over the 300-acre Akron air-port where the Zeppelin dock is located. Directions to motorists will be given from the air.

In honor of the launching of the greatest lighter-than-air craft, the army and navy will stage one of the greatest displays of heavier-than-air craft. Sixty eight service planes will take part in the maneuvers and many traditional civilian airplanes are expected to be on hand.

Strict orders have been issued that when Mrs. Hoover arrives at the dock all planes and blimps will be grounded. The order emanated from the White House, which was displeased with the annoyance caused by airplanes flying above the Harding Memorial at Marion, O., earlier in the summer while President Hoover was speaking there at the memorial dedication.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

If I have told you earthly things, and ye believe not, how shall ye believe, if I tell you of heavenly things?—St. John, iv, 12.

FACTS OF LAW

The provision of the revenue act of 1926 that holds gifts made within two years of the death of the decedent to be taxable is declared by a federal judge for the southern district of New York to be unconstitutional. This ruling, if it is upheld by the circuit or supreme court, will necessitate the federal government's returning between $50,000,000 and $100,000,000, which it has collected on the law's assumption that gifts or transfers made in contemplation of death, where they exceed $5,000, are liable under the estate tax.

The facts before the court were these: About a year and five months before his death, a resident of New York gave his daughter and son-in-law, as a wedding present, a house valued at $71,800. The government collected $2,000 on the value of the gift, as a transfer tax.

Judge Alfred C. Cox states in his opinion:

"The law should not make a presumption contrary to facts. The period (established by law) is purely arbitrary, and the gift is taxed without regard to the facts or the actual intent. This is enough to bring it (the law) within the constitutional bar."

The constitutional bar referred to is the fifth amendment, which provides that no person shall be deprived of property without due process of law.

Whatever view the higher courts may take of Judge Cox's ruling, a lawman must find it both logical and heartening. The original purpose of the bar erected by the revenue law was laudable; but in pursuing that purpose the law ran into the absurdity of declaring in effect that a man can guess, within two years, when he is going to die. The treasury must be protected against those who would rob it of its rightful due by giving away their estates on their deathbeds; but this protection cannot properly be carried to the point of implying that a man who is killed in an accident a day or a month or a year after giving his daughter a house or his son a farm, was moved to such generosity by contemplation of death and a desire to defraud the government.

The consideration that should guide in all such cases is the actual intent of the donor, a matter of fact for the government to establish before it has a rightful claim to a transfer tax.

HAS NOT CHANGED

Calvin Coolidge has departed marvelously from his regular form if he is at all pleased by the statement of his "friend and former physician" Dr. James E. Coupal who says the ex-president was chagrined because he was not drafted for renomination in 1928 and could be induced to run in 1932. But we do not believe Mr. Coolidge has changed in any such extraordinary way.

To accept Dr. Coupal's statement as reliable and authoritative would be to concede that Calvin Coolidge was insincere, not to say hypocritical, when he made his famous "I do not choose to run" announcement and later reiterated it with emphasis and finality. And the idea that Mr. Coolidge is anything but an honest man is absurd.

Besides, it was perfectly obvious in 1928 that Mr. Coolidge could have a renomination at the hands of his party on a silver platter, if he would consent to accept it. There was little denial of the general assumption that, in case he should run for the presidency, his success at the polls would follow as a matter of course. He was obliged to make a definite struggle to avoid being drafted against his will.

Mr. Coolidge explained quite plainly that he was quitting the field because he had enough of the White House, at least for the time being. He thought ten consecutive years would be "too much for one man" in the way of wear and tear. He also expressed a belief that he had finished his work as president. There is every reason to believe that he meant just what he said.

Since leaving the White House, Mr. Coolidge has been a supporter and well-wisher of the Hoover administration. It would be a direct and violent contradiction of his whole life record, if he should now appear in the field against his successor; and there is nothing to indicate that Mr. Hoover thinks of retiring voluntarily. On the contrary it is generally assumed, even by ill-wishers in the party, that he will be the Republican standard-bearer again next year.

Some time, under proper conditions Calvin Coolidge may again be a candidate for the presidency. He never has said or done anything that will prevent him from taking such a step. But so far as the present is concerned, Dr. Coupal's story may reasonably be considered just another hot weather yarn.

RED CROSS LIMITATION

The chairman of the American Red Cross states that, while local chapters are free to use their own resources for unemployment relief, the national organization is prevented by its charter from expending its funds for that purpose. All but fifty cents from each membership is retained by the local chapters. The national organization's share is earmarked in time of peace for the prevention of suffering that might result from "acts of God."

The same question came up recently when the American Red Cross was appealed to on behalf of striking miners in the coal fields. The same reply had to be given. A strike is not an "act of God" and it is only reasonable to expect that those who are responsible for it shall look after its victims. A business depression that results in unemployment is not an "act of God;" and the American Red Cross could not dissipate its resources in unemployment relief without both violating its charter and impairing its ability to discharge its proper duties in the particular field delimited for its charitable activities.

Attacks have recently been made on the American Red Cross from some quarters, and demands have been made on it from other quarters, which bear unmistakable evidence of socialistic origin. The attempt made in the last congress to force a large federal appropriation on the society was an attempt to rob it of its private character by converting it into an agency for dispensing public doles. The defeat of that attempt saved the American Red Cross to carry on its noble work in its own field, while leaving other fields to be tilled by other organizations, among the latter its own local chapters.

WATCHING UNFOLDING OF A SUMMER CYCLONE

If we fail to take notice, a summer cyclone lasting some three days—from the first symptoms of sultry heat, on through the clouds and rain, and finally the clearing—may carry on and we never be conscious that we have been on the underside of a real mechanical storm structure. If we but watched the physical unfolding of a low in summer, we would see the progress of it knowingly: It usually disturbs us with that trying sultry air, while feathery cirrus clouds form aloft and a gentle breeze comes from the east. The breeze shifts finally to the west, via the south if storm center is to the north; but from east around to the west via the north if storm center is south of us.

PRISONS ARE IMPROVING, SAYS HEAD OF PRISONERS' RELIEF ORGANIZATION

WASHINGTON. — "Governors who say that their various states penitentiaries are not so bad as the late Wickersham report represents, are quite generally correct," according to President E. Dudding of the Prisoners' Relief society, himself an ex-convict and probably the best-known individual in the country concerning conditions in American penal institutions.

"The report," continued Dr. Dudding, "presents a true picture of life in many prisons at the time of the Columbus (O.) penitentiary fire."

"That fire, however, served as just the necessary shock to hasten reforms, in the short period since it occurred, which might otherwise have been delayed for years."

"I don't deny," admitted the doctor, "that there is room for further improvement. Legislatures act slowly. Prison officialdom is transformed only by the gradual processes of education. Political influence dies hard."

"Nevertheless, to the extent that penitentiaries can be made tolerable for human habitation, the federal government's do not leave a great deal to be desired."

"State penitentiaries all are better at least, than they were."

"The lash and other brutal punishments have been almost entirely abolished. Crooks in positions of authority have been pretty thoroughly weeded out."

"There still is considerable overcrowding, but enlargements are being made as fast as reasonably can be expected."

"The situation, summarized, is as different today from one which prevailed when the Wickersham commission was conducting its inquiry as if a generation had intervened between then and now."

"Of course I am not referring to the state of affairs in most of our city and county jails. Investigators should turn their attention next to these foul holes."

"The fact is," said Dr. Dudding, "that the Wickersham commission seems to have dealt too much in theories to make its conclusions very valuable."

"For example, it evidently failed utterly to realize that our penitentiaries are crammed at present with inmates who are not in any proper sense, criminals at all."

"In every penitentiary there always has been a scattering of men of perfectly decent instincts, behind the bars as a result of mere mischance of one sort or another. Formerly, however, they were not so great a proportion of the total number of convicts. Broadly speaking, it was a fair presumption that a man who had been convicted of a breach of the law needed making over to fit him for useful citizenship. At a conservative estimate I would say that half of our penitentiaries' post-war population requires no reclamation, and cannot even be contaminated by prison influences."

"The figures," observed the doctor, "tell their own story."

"In 1917 only 53 per cent of the country's penitentiary inmates were first offenders. In 1930 the proportion of first offenders had risen to 91 per cent."

"Does this mean an enormous increase in the number of criminals or an increase in the number of acts which hitherto were not regarded as crimes but are so regarded now?"

"It appears to me that the latter interpretation is unescapable."

"With the growing complexity of society," said the doctor, "no doubt the creation of some few new crimes is unavoidable, but the addition of so many as to swell our national prison population by nearly 70 per cent strikes me as overdoing the matter."

"Better law enforcement can hardly be given as the reason for the increase, since the testimony of practically all experts indicates that law has not been as strictly enforced in the last decade as before."

"My mission is the salvaging of criminals; not criticism of the law."

"For all that, I cannot help questioning the expediency or justice of a system which places the prison stigma upon young men who, within my recollection, would have classed as really promising specimens of the rising generation and whom, even yet, the prison stigma itself is not sufficient to spoil."

BARRIER STARTING SYSTEM IS INTRODUCED HERE WEDNESDAY

Indianapolis Filly Wins Stake For Three-Year-Old Pacers, Feature Event On Program; Large Crowd Sees Opening Speed Events

By PHIL FRAME

The barrier starting device as devised by Steve G. Phillips, Xenia, nationally known starting judge, was tried and not found wanting Wednesday afternoon at the inaugural of the three-day Southwestern Ohio Shortstop Fair Circuit harness racing meet held in conjunction with the ninety-second annual Greene County Fair at the Xenia fairgrounds.

Marking the first time the greater percentage of local devotees of the harness sport had glimpsed the barrier in operation, the system was used during the first two class races on the four-event program.

Acclaimed by a majority of race fans and a goodly number of the horsemen as superior in many ways to the old-fashioned method of scoring the wiggles down the stretch, the contrivance proved so clearly popular that fair board officials unhesitatingly voted to continue use of the system during the remaining two days of the meeting.

Employed at the 2:18 pace entry of J. C. Mitchell, Mechanics and the 2:22 trot, two class events, won the first brush handily which ushered in the initial card, the system proved beneficial as a time-saver if nothing else. It took a total of only six minutes and forty seconds to get the fields away in the seven heats of the first two races after the horses had been lined up behind the barrier. This was an average of ninety seconds a heat. The shortest elapsed time was ten seconds in the second heat of the 2:22 trot, while the longest period of waiting was in the third heat of this same event when one bad actor held up proceedings for slightly more than three minutes.

The plan was discarded for the last two races, the three-year-old pacing stake and the two-year-old trotting stake, in view of the fact the colts have had little experience with the barrier and are easily frightened, even more so by a band snapping across the track in front of them.

Capturing the second and third heats after finishing sixth in the first twice around the half-mile oval, Millie Lena, bay filly by Arion McKinney, owned and driven by D. H. Kelly, Indianapolis, Ind., horseman accounted for the three-year-old pacing stake valued at $500, third event and feature offering on the opening day's program.

This race, bringing together a field of eight capable pacers, was productive of the finest competition of the afternoon. The Outlook, an "Big Ed" Jacobs, handy man on the roster of the Downtowner team, is believed to have a clear claim to the title of being the laziest individual on this or any other team. Jake is most calm and deliberate in his movements. Several weeks ago he was pressed into service as a pitcher. Using a slow ball that almost stopped in mid-air, Jake hurled his team to a victory over the Criterion. So weary was Ed, however, that they say Clark Eckerle, center fielder, beat him back to the bench after every half inning, and when the Downtowners took the field every player, including the outfielders, were in position before Jake could walk the short distance to the mound in the middle of the diamond. Oh hum, spring is here now.

"Tiny" Smith, who became temporary manager of the Criterion softballers when Herman Wells was bitten by the vacation bug, is broadcasting an appeal for out-of-town games for the Clothiers. Teams outside the city are urgently requested to communicate with TINY SMITH.

It was the Lang Chevrolet half of the seventh inning in the "crucial" game with the D. T. C. Club Monday night. Runners were on first and second and Lee Ruse was batting. Lee knocked a hard liner toward third and "Polly" Parratt partly blocked down the ball, which glanced and struck "Mickey" McFadden, who was umpiring at third base. The ball was recovered before it could roll into the crowd but many persons thought the fact the ball had hit an umpire entitled the runners to an extra base. "Mickey" ruled against this and the bases were loaded instead of a runner scoring. Later he consulted a rule book and found his decision to be correct. The rules say that when a batted ball first hits a fielder and then strikes an umpire, providing the arbiter is standing in foul territory, runners advance at their own risk and are not automatically entitled to an extra base.

Dr. Reed Madden witnessed his first, or one of his first, softball games Monday night, and confided that he enjoyed it better than any major league baseball game he had ever witnessed. That is a real testimonial. Xenia's eye and ear specialist is now apparently a convert to the sport.

N. Y. STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—The stock market resumed its irregular drift toward lower price levels today, with a continuation of quiet but inconsistent pressure against the ranking speculative leaders making for a subdued tone all along the line.

Once again it was the heaviest in the rails which more than any other factor enhanced bearishness toward the near term outlook for prices.

BROADWAY BRIDE

By ETHELDA BEDFORD, Author of "DEAR DIARY"

© 1931 CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION, INC.

READ THIS FIRST:

Nita and Natalie Dudley, orphaned small town sisters, both attractive, are on their way to New York, intent on bettering themselves. Nita is the smart girl of today. Natalie is the more reserved, younger. She wonders where Nita has obtained money for the trip, and besides, she is carrying orchids. Nita shocks Natalie by informing that she obtained the money from Natalie's former employer. Natalie is concerned, hurt. Nita explains that she has borrowed the money, and explains the conditions, but Natalie remains worried. A young man, sitting opposite them in the Pullman, offers them a magazine. Nita flirts with him.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER 3

BILLY LANE'S office was the first place Nita tried to find after she and Natalie arrived in New York and took their bags to a small hotel which had been recommended to them by a cousin who occasionally visited New York.

Only Nita did not get near his office the first day she set out to find it. She was too busy getting on and off of wrong subways.

When she finally found the Broadway address a little girl with red lips and coppery colored hair in plastered waves, who called herself a "receptionist," snapped:

"Mr. Lane is in conference!" importantly. "Did you have an appointment?"

"No, why, you see, he doesn't know me—yet. But—"

"Mr. Lane will be busy all afternoon. Any message?"

Nita was awed by the luxurious red-cushioned, massively carved furniture of the office. Her feet actually buried themselves in the deep, dark blue rug. There were tapestries about the walls. She had never dreamed of any office being like this. She thought it seemed more like a palace.

"I'm a stranger to Mr. Lane, but you see, I've heard him on the air and I just wanted to—meet him . . . I am a stranger."

"A who?" inquired the red lips, with pencil poised over a pad.

"A stranger," repeated Nita, taken back a little by the pertness of the girl. "But I—I am a crooner, you see."

Surely there would be some softening of the clown-like features framed by the coppery colored plastered waves. Nita had counted on some sign of friendliness, so she smiled when she said she crooned. Hadn't she read that Billy Lane always held out a welcoming hand to unheard of crooners? His entire office staff, no doubt, maintained this hospitable policy.

"Oh," escaped the red lips, "I see," without the slightest bit of enthusiasm and nothing which the eager Nita might interpret as interest.

The pad and pencil were replaced with something of finality in the drawer of the massive, hand-carved piece of furniture which served the pert person for a desk.

"Mr. Lane is pretty busy—all the time. Why don't you try coming in some other day when you're around here."

Her mascaraed lids were lowered over her impudent blue eyes as she spoke, thus conveying to Nita the hopelessness of her trying to see the famous songster.

The Theater

In spite of all the sound and fury about Westerns and mystery stories being the new cinema rage, matrimonial problem dramas remain the most popular choice.

Paramount has just made a be-comical as "Speedy" and it will be sure you never shall again. It is now showing at 5. A final line reads: "Coming, Coming, Coming."

James Whale has the makings of a fine picture in "Waterloo Bridge", which he directed for Universal. Kent Douglas, a sensitive, capable young actor, gets his first real chance in this film and comes through splendidly—so splendidly, in fact, that he has been given the juvenile role in support of Walter Huston in the magazine story by Olive Edens which Universal has just purchased. Its present title is "Heart and Hand", which will be changed. John Clymer has written a screen adaptation and John Huston, son of the star, has done the dialogue. Universal has also purchased the play, "Oh, Promise Me" by Howard Lindsay and Bertrand Robinson which featured Lee Tracy at the Morosco Theater in New York last season. It will be used in this year's performance.

Mr. Charles Darlington has gone to French Lick Springs to spend a week or ten days. Wanted to buy a two-wheeled push cart. Must be in good condition. Call at Gazette office. (This appeared in the local items twenty years ago.)

Another quilt club has blossomed forth in the city and is located on Chestnut St. There are about a dozen of these clubs scattered about the city now.

Juliette Compton
Juliette Compton was bestowed with the title, "The Best Figure in the British Isles," before she came to Hollywood.

Felix Young. At the time, movie money was rumored back of the production, but if so it never came into the open. Sam H. Harris later was associated with Young in a Broadway presentation of the play.

The film version will be done by Mr. Pascal who for a number of years, has been a regular contributor to the movies.

When Warners reopen in September, William Wellman will make a new start on "Safe in Hell", with a different star. This film was stopped after four days in production because studio officials decided Lillian Bond looked too much like an ingenue to play Huston Branch's heroine. The new version will find Barbara Stanwyck in the leading role with a supporting cast that will make you sit up and take notice. Among the prominent names will be Richard Bennett, J. Farrell MacDonald, Nina Mae McKinney, Ivan Simpson and Nable Johnson.

An American doctor in Tsinan, Shantung, China, sends Harold Lloyd this English handbill, distributed by the local Chinese theater: "A valuable, well-known comedy was humorously and dangerously performed by Harold Lloyd. It is a final, most famous silent picture ever done by Harold Lloyd and therefore its value is needless to be commended and praised. We daresay you have never before seen any picture so lucky."

DEPUTY SHERIFF KEPT BUSY BY LOST KIDS

SELF-appointed guardian of lost, strayed or stolen children was the unique role portrayed by L. A. Davis, county road patrolman at the Xenia fairgrounds on the opening day of the fair Wednesday.

Separated from relatives or friends for several hours, a little boy answering to the name of Eddie Gould, sat down in the dense crowd of fair patrons and started to cry. Officer Davis chaperoned the youngster to the judges' stand across the race track and the boy's name was broadcast through the loud speaker system.

Not long afterward, the road patrolman returned to the stand carrying in his arms an even younger boy, similarly lost in the throng of people, who said his name was Bernard Maxwell. The broadcast plan was repeated and in both instances the children were taken to the office of the fair board secretary, where their parents found them.

Renewed interest in the baffling murder of Charles Crawford, wealthy politician, and Herbert Spencer, California newspaper-man, has gripped Los Angeles and the entire west coast with the opening of the trial of David Clark, above. Clark, former deputy district attorney, who drew 70,000 votes when he continued to run for municipal judge following his arrest, is charged with the double slaying.

FAIR BOARD ELATED OVER ATTENDANCE

Every LUCKY STRIKE is made of the finest tobacco leaves the world can offer—the finest from Turkey—the finest from Kentucky, Tennessee, Virginia, Georgia and the Carolinas—the Cream of many Crops throughout the world. But all tobacco leaves, regardless of price and kind, as nature produces them, contain harsh irritants. LUCKY STRIKE'S exclusive "TOASTING" Process—a process that mellows, that purifies, that includes the use of the modern Ultra Violet Ray—expels certain harsh irritants naturally present in every tobacco leaf. We sell these expelled irritants to manufacturers of chemical compounds, who use them as a base in making sheep-dip*, as well as a powerful spraying solution for fruits, flowers and shrubs—enough to permit the daily dipping of over 50,000 sheep or the daily spraying of many thousands of trees. Thus, you are sure these irritants, naturally present in all tobacco leaves, are not in your LUCKY STRIKE. "They're out—so they can't be in!" No wonder LUCKIES are always kind to your throat.

YOU CAN KEEP. YOUR KITCHEN

Cool

At least three times a day, someone in your home spends a good many minutes in the kitchen preparing meals. To her this room is important. Sometimes it is uncomfortable. It overshadows the pleasures of summer, simply because of the oppressive heat that comes from old-fashioned ranges, particularly before dinner when she is constantly beside the range attending to her cooking.

Is her "workshop" as convenient and pleasant as you can make it? Your home is not completely modern without a modern gas range. Think how easy it is to use. Simply turn a handle . . . and you have clean concentrated cooking heat that is confined to its job of cooking. Insulated ovens keep the heat inside where it belongs. Simmering burners cook and keep cooked dishes warm without heating the kitchen. Heat, well directed, cooks quickly . . . and only a minimum of it escapes.

Gas is a valuable servant. In no appliance does it so fully assert its value as in the modern gas range. If the kitchen in your home is hot . . . if the cook in the kitchen finds cooking a burden, remember this: Gas, through a modern gas range, will modernize your kitchen and make it a happy place to work.

Flyers Converge On Japanese City In Thrilling Trips

TOKYO, Aug. 6.—The capital of the flowery kingdom became the focal point of aviation interest today as three long-distance aviators brought their planes down on local airports after difficult flights while Japanese authorities made preparations to receive Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh at the end of their leisurely vacation jaunt through the sub-Arctic regions.

Hugh Herndon, Jr., and Clyde Pangborn in their round-the-world monoplane Miss Veedol landed at Haneda Airport, Tokyo, shortly after the arrival there of Miss Amy Johnson from England in her Puss Moth plane.

Robert Deaton, 15, of St. Joseph, Mo., has been held for the murder of his foster mother, Mrs. Anne Deaton. Police say the youth admitted he had planned to kill his father also, but changed his mind when he saw his mother's body lying on the floor. He struck her with an iron pipe. The boy's desire to go to Chicago, a trip his parents objected to, led to the slaying, police say.

CONTINUE DRAIN ON GOLD RESOURCES OF BANK OF ENGLAND

Wild Rumors Spread
Over London; May
Need More Gold

LONDON, Aug. 6.—Despite strenuous efforts by British financial authorities to stem the outward flow of gold, the drain upon the resources of the bank of England continued today.

It was understood that an additional $10,000,000 of the precious metal had been sold within the last few hours, probably to France or Holland, the sale followed a mysterious and erratic flurry in the pound sterling and an unexpected break in the leading gold exchanges.

At the opening of the market, the pound sterling strengthened somewhat after all principal exchanges had slumped below the gold export point, and predictions that further shipments of gold from this country might become necessary were heard freely.

During the last twenty-four hours, the leading authorities of Throgmorton street have spent much of their time in denying and dispelling a crop of wild rumors, some of which were held responsible for the mysterious weakness in the exchange.

One of these rumors, found to be absolutely without foundation, hinted that a batch of some sort had developed in the $250,000 of credit extended to the Bank of England by the Bank of France and the Federal Reserve Bank of New York.

Simultaneously, rumors spread throughout Europe that a number of British banks were on the verge of insolvency. Every assurance was given that leading British banks are as strong as ever, and a member of the board of the bank of England stated that no batch whatever had developed in the Franco-American credit extension.

He added that the bank of England had not yet found it necessary to make use of one penny of the credit.

The financial editor of the London Daily Herald laid the fall of the pound sterling to "panic selling" by certain French bankers, while other writers charged that the baseless rumors all originated in Paris, indicating "the unbalanced state of mind of many French financiers and investors."

TO SHORTEN SCHOOL TERM

FALL TERM OPENING DELAYED TWO WEEKS TO SLASH EXPENSES

Will Save $5,000, Is Said;
Budget For Year
Is Sliced

Opening of the fall term of the 1931-32 school year in the Xenia public schools will be delayed for two weeks in September under a plan devised by the city board of education to cut expenses in the face of a lowered tax duplicate and uncertainty as to the revenue that classification of taxes will bring next year.

This announcement was made Thursday by Louis Hamerle, city school superintendent, who said that the fall term will convene September 14, approximately two weeks later than usual. Ordinarily, the school term commences the Tuesday after Labor Day.

Through postponement of the opening of school for two weeks the school board hopes to effect a saving of $5,000 in the pay roll of teachers and janitors.

The proposed 1932 budget for the city school system, prepared by the board and submitted to County Auditor James J. Curlett to be filed with the County Budget Commission, sets an appropriation about $22,000 less than was asked for the current year. The tentative budget, subject to revision, asks for only $173,556.25. Of this sum $119,515 is for general operating expenses and $54,041.25 to pay off bonded indebtedness.

This year's budget called for $195,442.06 for the city schools, including $123,618.31 for operating expenses and $71,928.75 for retirement of bonds, but this revenue is expected to be reduced by a low-level tax collection and the schools are not expected to receive as much as anticipated in the August distribution.

By cutting general operating expenses $5,000 and asking $17,000 less for bonded debt payments it is hoped to break about even financially on the 1931 calendar school year.

Should the new classification tax law, effective January 1, result in greater revenue for the schools next year, the school board hopes the school term may be lengthened for two weeks next spring to make up for the scheduled curtailment this fall.

Supt. Hamerle said the list of teachers employed for the next school year is still incomplete, but no reduction in the teaching personnel has been announced.

The matter of finding suitable pigeons for the occasion caused little concern. They first considered the ordinary variety of homing pigeons, but learned that the "get-away" of that breed was not all that could be desired.

Being homing pigeons, the flock could be relied upon to head for home, but just how long they might delay the start for a look around the mammoth hanger housing the dirigible, no one cared to predict. So the beautiful white homing pigeons were rejected and more homely, but also more dependable racers were substituted.

Today the great cigar-shaped battleship of the air was recognized by the navy simply as ZRS-4, its technical designation. It will be cut loose from its mooring and launched formally on Saturday as the first lady of the land releases a flock of racing pigeons and intones: "I christen thee U. S. S. Akron."

The time-honored ceremony of breaking a bottle of champagne, or in later years, a bottle of ginger ale, across the nose of a new ship will have no place in christening of the 6,500,000 cubic-foot dreadnaught of the skies.

Instead, a flock of forty-eight racing pigeons will be placed in a hatch halfway between the dirigible's nose and the underhanging control car. At a given signal, Mrs. Hoover will pull a cord attached to the hatchway and release the pigeons.

At the offices of the Greenland government here, today it was said that Cramer, some time ago deposited $1,000 to cover costs of a landing in Greenland. With Bert Hassell, Cramer attempted a trans-Atlantic flight via Greenland in 1928. Their plane cracked up in the interior of Greenland and searching parties were sent to find the flyers and bring them to safety.

CLEVELAND, Aug. 6.—Parke Cramer, American aviator, who landed unheralded on the east coast of Greenland, near Ammagasik, yesterday, was engaged in an attempt to chart an airmail route to Europe, via Canada, Greenland, Iceland, the Faeroe Islands and Denmark, officials of the transportation airlines corporation stated here today.

The aviator took off from Detroit July 28 on the flight over the north Atlantic, officials of the Trans-American Concern, backers of the flight, stated. He was accompanied by a radio expert, Oliver Paquette, who was loaned to the company for the flight by the Canadian government.

Announcements of the scheduled flight were withheld by the Trans-American Corporation.

"We tried to keep it from being publicized as spectacular," said E. Neville, public relations director of the concern said.

Cramer was flying in a cabin monoplane powered by a single motor. After taking off from Detroit, nothing more was heard from him by his backers until a dispatch was received at Copenhagen announcing his arrival at Greenland.

The present flight is Cramer's third attempt to chart an air mail route over the Atlantic. In 1928, Cramer with Bert Hassell attempted to fly from Rockford, Ill., to Scandinavia but was forced down in Greenland. He and his companions were lost for two weeks before being found by a rescue party.

Cramer also was a member of the crew of the "Untin Bowler" which also failed to complete a flight from Illinois to northern Europe in 1929.

Officials of the Transamerican Line, a subsidiary of the Thompson Aeronautical Corporation, stated that the plan to chart the air mail route had not been authorized by the government but that the attempt was made to determine the feasibility of the project.

From Greenland, Cramer will attempt to fly his plane across Iceland and the Faeroe Islands to Copenhagen, Denmark. The route is considered one of the most dangerous bits of flying country in the northern hemisphere.

That he was able to arrive at Ammagasik without attracting notice was credited to the wild nature of the country over which he flew on his first hop, and the concentration of public interest in other world flights.

Cramer is a native of Clarion, Pa., where his mother is now living. He is about 35 years of age and a few years ago was an inspector in the aviation division of the department of commerce at Washington, D. C., according to records at the office of the National Air Pilots Association.

PLAN ENFORCEMENT OF AUTO LIGHT LAWS

Police have been instructed to strictly enforce all ordinances relating to lights on motor vehicles, to stop all drivers whose cars are not properly equipped with lights and to ticket them for appearance at police headquarters if the wiring or the lights are defective and show negligence upon the part of the owner. If light bulbs are discovered to be burned out, however, the drivers will receive an opportunity to replace the bulbs instead of being handed a ticket.

AKLAVIK, Northwest Territory, Aug. 6.—Having completed nearly half of their 7,000 mile flight to Japan, Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh were in high hopes today of roaring onward to Point Barrow or Nome.

Bad weather threatened to hold them in this "metropolis of the Arctic," however. Rain and fog were reported generally over Alaska.

"We'll have to wait for the breaks," the flying colonel announced after listening to weather reports brought in by radio from various Alaskan points and from ships at sea.

When the Lindberghs do take off from Aklavik, they may decide to make the 1,100 mile hop to Nome direct, instead of stopping at Point Barrow, which is designated as "The Hope of the World."

This change in schedule will probably be necessary because the Strict orders have been issued that when Mrs. Hoover arrives at the dock all planes and blimps are to be grounded. The order emanated from the White House, which was displeased with the annoyance caused by airplanes flying above the Harding Memorial at Marion, O., earlier in the summer while President Hoover was speaking at the memorial dedication.

Poems that Live

GOOD-NIGHT
GOOD-NIGHT! ah! no; the hour is ill
Which severs those it should unite;
Let us remain together still,
Then it will be GOOD night.

How can I call the lone night
good,
Though thy sweet wishes wing
its flight?

Be it not said, thought, understood,
Then it will be GOOD night.

To hearts which near each other move,
From evening close to morning
light,

The night IS good; because, my love,
They never SAY good-night.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

If I have told you earthly things, and ye believe not, how shall ye believe, if I tell you of heavenly things?—St. John, iv, 12.

FACTS OF LAW

The provision of the revenue act of 1926 that holds gifts made within two years of the death of the decedent to be taxable is declared by a federal judge for the southern district of New York to be unconstitutional. This ruling, if it is upheld by the circuit or supreme court, will necessitate the federal government's returning between $50,000,000 and $100,000,000, which it has collected on the law's assumption that gifts or transfers made in contemplation of death, where they exceed $5,000, are liable under the estate tax.

The facts before the court were these: About a year and five months before his death, a resident of New York gave his daughter and son-in-law, as a wedding present, a house valued at $71,800. The government collected $2,000 on the value of the gift, as a transfer tax.

Judge Alfred C. Coxe states in his opinion:

"The law should not make a presumption contrary to facts. The period (established by law) is purely arbitrary, and the gift is taxed without regard to the facts or the actual intent. This is enough to bring it (the law) within the constitutional bar."

The constitutional bar referred to is the fifth amendment, which provides that no person shall be deprived of property without due process of law.

Whatever view the higher courts may take of Judge Coxe's ruling, a lawman must find it both logical and heartening. The original purpose of the bar erected by the revenue law was laudable; but in pursuing that purpose the law ran into the absurdity of declaring in effect that a man can guess, within two years, when he is going to die. The treasury must be protected against those who would rob it of its rightful due by giving away their estates on their deathbeds; but this protection cannot properly be carried to the point of implying that a man who is killed in an accident a day or a month or a year after giving his daughter a house or his son a farm, was moved to such generosity by contemplation of death and a desire to defraud the government.

The consideration that should guide in all such cases is the actual intent of the donor, a matter of fact for the government to establish before it has a rightful claim to a transfer tax.

HAS NOT CHANGED

Calvin Coolidge has departed marvelously from his regular form if he is at all pleased by the statement of his "friend and former physician" Dr. James E. Coupal who says the ex-president was chagrined because he was not drafted for renomination in 1928 and could be induced to run in 1932. But we do not believe Mr. Coolidge has changed in any such extraordinary way.

To accept Dr. Coupal's statement as reliable and authoritative would be to concede that Calvin Coolidge was insincere, not to say hypocritical, when he made his famous "I do not choose to run" announcement and later reiterated it with emphasis and finality. And the idea that Mr. Coolidge is anything but an honest man is absurd.

Beside that, it was perfectly obvious in 1928 that Mr. Coolidge could have a renomination at the hands of his party on a silver platter, if he would consent to accept it. There was little denial of the general assumption that, in case he should run for the presidency, his success at the polls would follow as a matter of course. He was obliged to make a definite struggle to avoid being drafted against his will.

Mr. Coolidge explained quite plainly that he was quitting the field because he had enough of the White House, at least for the time being. He thought ten consecutive years would be "too much for one man" in the way of wear and tear. He also expressed a belief that he had finished his work as president. There is every reason to believe that he meant just what he said.

Since leaving the White House, Mr. Coolidge has been a supporter and well-wisher of the Hoover administration. It would be a direct and violent contradiction of his whole life record, if he should now appear in the field against his successor; and there is nothing to indicate that Mr. Hoover thinks of retiring voluntarily. On the contrary it is generally assumed, even by ill-wishers in the party, that he will be the Republican standard bearer again next year.

Some time, under proper conditions Calvin Coolidge may again become a candidate for the presidency. He never has said or done anything that will prevent him from taking such a step. But so far as the present is concerned, Dr. Coupal's story may reasonably be considered just another hot weather yarn.

RED CROSS LIMITATION

The chairman of the American Red Cross states that, while local chapters are free to use their own resources for unemployment relief, the national organization is prevented by its charter from expending its funds for that purpose. All but fifty cents from each membership is retained by the local chapters. The national organization's share is earmarked in time of peace for the prevention of suffering that might result from "acts of God."

The same question came up recently when the American Red Cross was appealed to on behalf of striking miners in the coal fields. The same reply had to be given. A strike is not an "act of God" and it is only reasonable to expect that those who are responsible for it shall look after its victims. A business depression that results in unemployment is not an "act of God," and the American Red Cross could not dissipate its resources in unemployment relief without both violating its charter and impairing its ability to discharge its proper duties in the particular field delimited for its charitable activities.

Attacks have recently been made on the American Red Cross from some quarters and demands have been made on it from other quarters, which bear unmistakable evidence of socialistic origin. The attempt made in the last congress to force a large federal appropriation on the society was an attempt to rob it of its private character by converting it into an agency for dispensing public doles. The defeat of that attempt saved the American Red Cross to carry on its noble work in its own field, while leaving other fields to be filled by other organizations, among the latter its own local chapters.

Charles Hayden, the first-string financier, director of more than 70 big banks and industries, is 62 years old. He looks 40—and people who don't even know he's Charley Hayden take him for 40, which establishes the point. A day for him consists of an early round of golf, a swim, a few hours of business, three sets of tennis finished with another swim, a go at hand-ball, a shower, dinner and three hours' steady dancing. "I rarely go to bed tired," he says.

WATCHING UNFOLDING OF A SUMMER CYCLONE

If we fail to take notice, a summer cyclone lasting some three days—from the first symptoms of sultry weather, on through the clouds and rain, and finally the clearing—may carry on and we never be conscious that we have been on the underside of a real mechanical storm structure. If we but watched the physical unfolding of a low in summer, we would view the progress of it knowingly. It usually disturbs us that trying sultry air, while leathery cirrus clouds form a lot to the west, the south if storm center is to the north; but from east around to the west via the north if storm center is south of us.

WASHINGTON. — "Governors who say that their various states penitentiaries are not so bad as the late Wickersham report represents, are quite generally correct," according to President E. Dudding of the Prisoners' Relief society, himself an ex-convict and probably the best-known individual in the country concerning conditions in American penal institutions.

"In every penitentiary there always has been a scattering of men of perfectly decent instincts, behind the bars as a result of mere mischance of one sort or another. However, they were not so great a proportion of the total number of convicts. Broadly speaking, it was a fair presumption that a man who had been convicted of a breach of the law needed making over to fit him for useful citizenship. At a conservative estimate I would say that half of our penitentiaries' post-war population requires no reclamation, and cannot even be contaminated by prison influences."

"That fire, however, served as just the necessary shock to hasten reforms, in the short period since it occurred, which might otherwise have been delayed for years."

"I don't deny," admitted the doctor, "that there is room for further improvement. Legislatures act slowly. Prison officialdom is transformed only by the gradual processes of education. Political influence does hard."

"Nevertheless, to the extent that penitentiaries can be made tolerable for human habitation, the federal government's do not leave a great deal to be desired."

"State penitentiaries all are better at least, than they were."

"The lash and other brutal punishments have been almost entirely abolished. Crooks in positions of authority have been pretty thoroughly weeded out."

"There still is considerable overcrowding, but enlargements are being made as fast as reasonably can be expected."

"The situation, summarized, is as different today from the one which prevailed when the Wickersham commission was conducting its inquiry as if a generation had intervened between them and now."

"Of course I am not referring to the state of affairs in most of our city and county jails. Investigators should turn their attention next to these foul holes."

"My mission is the salvaging of criminals; not criticism of the law. For all that, I cannot help questioning the expediency or justice of a system which places the prison stigma upon young men who, within my recollection, would have classed as really promising

Never Mind the Tact! I'll Take Frankness

It Doesn't Hurt So Much
Is my nose red? Is it too big? Too small? Do my ears stick out? Am I getting fat? Is one of my garters broken? Don't my socks match? Don't I pronounce my words correctly? Did I mess up that funny story and mangle the point in telling it? Is a button off my vest? Is my shirt tail out? Have I been making an ass of myself?

Well, don't be tactful . . . Tell me if you must, but please—oh, please!—don't beat around the bush . . . Be brutal! Be brutally frank! Cut deep and wipe away the blood! But don't be polite in that dev'ous way, don't try to spare my feelings, don't try to be so tactful! I can stand the frankness, but I can't endure that TACT!

I can eat spinach. At a pinch I can get through a helping of eggplant. I can even pile out of bed in the middle of the night to answer a wrong phone number and not get too mad about it. I've been cheated sometimes, too, and been able to admire the cheater if he was clever enough. I've been imposed on and bluffed out and ignored, and occasionally I've shrugged my shoulders and been philosophical about it . . .

But TACT blows me up and makes me furious.

Half the time when you're "tactful" you're assuming that the other fellow can't stand the truth. You're saying to yourself, "I mustn't let him know, I must spare his feelings." You inform him very devilishly that his insurance policy does not cover the accident, that his house burned down while he was away for the week-end, that your dog got into his garden and chewed up his choicest dahlia—and then you try to get a block away before he completely understands the meaning of the bad news.

That's supposed to be tact!

But it isn't—it's just foolishness! The dictionary says, that tact is "a nice discernment of the best course of action under given circumstances." It also defines tact as "a peculiar ability to deal with others without giving offense." But it does NOT call it "pussy-footing" or "beating around the bush." Tact can also be speaking right up, blunting it out. It can be a frank compliment, an open criticism.

I can have my choice, I'll take the Modern Frankness and you can keep your Old-Fashioned Tact. I never did like it, and I don't know anybody that ever did—when it was used on them!

WHEN A LOW MAW PRODUCES A DROUGHT

By Arthur Dev. Carpenter

An area of high barometric pressure that follows in the wake of a low is of approximately the same dimensions as a low—from 500 miles to several thousand miles in diameter. When in summer one of these highs becomes stalled, settling down over a vast area of country and remaining dormant, the consequence is a dry spell. If it remains long enough it may produce a serious drought.

The explanation of this is easy: As the high consists of a vast descending air current, it brings with it no water vapor. The atmosphere from a descending air current has already lost its moisture through condensation and precipitation while it was being carried upward in the low that preceded it.

When applying the polish, the strokes of the brush should be made with the grain of the nail. The polish should be applied on the pink part of the nail only, and not on the half moons. The brush should not be too dry, as this may ter-

Thin Folks Must Eat To Get Fat

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

Most people diet because they want to get thin, but a few want to diet in order to get fat. Their problem is a truly difficult one, especially if they are past 50 years of age. It is not, however, a very grave problem. Dangers do not threaten the thin person as they do the obese. He is more comfortable, more active and more energetic than his overweight brother. He is longer lived, provided he reaches the age of 40. After 40 the overweights begin to drop off, but the underweight on the average has a long stretch ahead of him.

The diseases which were reduced in number were diabetes, gout, dyspepsia of all kinds and, surprisingly, the toxemias of pregnancy.

Certain other diseases, on the contrary, increased in number—notably tuberculosis and anemia.

To put on weight is highly desirable for many otherwise healthy very thin persons. Besides that there are many conditions of undernutrition due to disease when the same thing is indicated. These latter are following a fever, or convalescence from other sorts of illness, such as surgical operations. Debilitating diseases, such as exophthalmic goiter, also require an extra food allowance, for the body consumes food more rapidly in that condition. The principles of such diets will be discussed tomorrow.

Good Racing Launches County Fair Meeting

BARRIER STARTING SYSTEM IS INTRODUCED HERE WEDNESDAY

Indianapolis Filly Wins Stake For Three-Year-Old Pacers, Feature Event On Program; Large Crowd Sees Opening Speed Events

By PHIL FRAME

The barrier starting device as devised by Steve G. Phillips, Xenia, nationally known starting judge, was tried and found wanting Wednesday afternoon at the inaugural of the three-day Southwestern Ohio Shortship Fair Circuit harness racing meet held in conjunction with the ninety-second annual Greene County Fair at the Xenia fairgrounds.

Marking the first time the greater percentage of local devotees of the harness sport had glimpsed the barrier in operation, the system was used during the first two class races on the four-event program.

Acclaimed by a majority of race fans and a goodly number of the horsemen as superior in many ways to the old-fashioned method of scoring the wigglers down the stretch, the contrivance proved so clearly popular that fair board officials unhesitatingly voted to continue use of the system during the remaining two days of the meeting.

Employed during the 2:18 pace entry of J. C. Mitchell, Mechanicsburg, won the first brush handily and was nosed out the next two trips by Mill Lena, which was given the system proved beneficial as a time-saver if nothing else. It took a total of only six minutes and forty seconds to get the fields away in the seven heats of the first two races after the horses had been lined up behind the barrier. This was an average of ninety seconds a heat. The shortest elapsed time was ten seconds in the second heat of the 2:22 trot, while the longest period of waiting was in the third heat of this same event when one bad actor held up proceedings for slightly more than three minutes.

The plan was discarded for the last two races, the three-year-old pacing stake and the two-year-old trotting stake, in view of the fact the colts had little experience with the barrier and are easily frightened, even more so by a band snapping across the track in front of them.

Capturing the second and third heats after finishing sixth in the first twice around the half-mile oval, Mill Lena, bay filly by Arion McKinney, owned and driven by D. H. Kelly, Indianapolis, Indiana, accounted for the three-year-old pacing stake valued at $500, third event and feature offering on the opening day's program.

This race, bringing together a field of eight capable pacers, was productive of the finest competition of the afternoon. The Outlook, an

"Big Ed" Jacobs, handy man on the roster of the Downtowner team, is believed to have a clear claim to the title of being the laziest individual on this or any other team. Jake is most calm and deliberate in his movements. Several weeks ago he was pressed into service as a pitcher. Using a slow ball that almost stopped in mid-air, Jake hurled his team to a victory over the Criterion. So weary was Ed, however, that they say Clark Eckerle, center fielder, beat him back to the bench after every half inning, and when the Downtowners took the field every player, including the outfields, were in position before Jake could walk the short distance to the mound in the middle of the diamond. Oh hum, spring is here now.

"Tiny" Smith, who became temporary manager of the Criterion softballers when Herman Wells was bidden by the vacation bug, is broadcasting an appeal for out-of-town games for the Clothiers. Teams outside the city are urgently requested to communicate with TINY SMITH.

It was the Lang Chevrolet half of the seventh inning in the "crucial" game with the D. T. C. Club Monday night. Runners were on first and second and Lee Ruse was batting. Lee knocked a hard liner toward third and "Polly" Parrett partly blocked down the ball, which glanced and struck "Mickey" McFadden, who was umpiring at third base. The ball was recovered before it could roll into the crowd but many persons thought the fact the ball had hit an umpire entitled the runners to an extra base. "Mickey" ruled against this and the bases were loaded instead of a runner scoring. Later he consulted a rule book and found his decision to be correct. The rules say that when a batted ball first hits a fielder and then strikes an umpire, providing the arbiter is standing in foul territory, runners advance at their own risk and are not automatically entitled to an extra base.

Dr. Reed Madden witnessed his first, or one of his first, softball games Monday night, and confided that he enjoyed it better than any major league baseball game he had ever witnessed. That is a real testimonial. Xenia's eye and ear specialist is now apparently a convert to the sport.

N. Y. STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—The stock market resumed its irregular drift toward lower price levels today, with a continuation of quiet but in-sistent pressure against the ranking speculative leaders making for a subdued tone all along the line.

Once again it was the heaviness in the rails which more than any other factor enhanced bearishness toward the near term outlook for prices.

ACCUSE THREE OF DYNAMITING FISH

With the arrest of three men, two of whom are residents of Zimmerman, the state conservation division announced Wednesday its belief a group of persons who had engaged in dynamiting fish in Greene and Fayette Counties had been broken up.

The department reported William Hunt, Dayton, had paid a fine of $100 and George Lantz and George Harshman, both of Zimmerman, had pleaded not guilty.

The arrests were made by Game Supervisors Frank Hurd, Washington C. H., Karl Keller, Dayton, and James W. Stuber, of the state division of conservation. Stuber hinted additional arrests would be made.

Patrolmen will inspect the unoccupied premises several times each night in making their rounds and will make certain that windows and doors are securely locked. Nita and Natalie Dudley, orphaned small town sisters, both attractive, are on their way to New York, intent on bettering themselves. Nita is the smart girl of today. Natalie is the more reserved, younger. She wonders where Nita has obtained money for the trip, and besides, she is carrying orchids. Nita shocks Natalie by intimating that she obtained the money from Natalie's former employer. Natalie is concerned, hurt. Nita explains that she has borrowed the money, and explains the conditions, but Natalie remains worried. A young man, sitting opposite them in the Pullman, offers them a magazine. Nita flirts with him.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER 3

BILLY LANE'S office was the first place Nita tried to find after she and Natalie arrived in New York and took their bags to a small hotel which had been recommended to them by a cousin who occasionally visited New York.

Only Nita did not get near his office the first day she set out to find it. She was too busy getting on and off of wrong subways.

When she finally found the Broadway address a little girl with red lips and copper colored hair in plastered waves, who called herself a "receptionist," snapped,

"Mr. Lane is in conference!" importantly. "Did you have an appointment?"

"No—why, you see, he doesn't know me—yet. But—"

"Mr. Lane will be busy all afternoon. Any message?"

Nita was awed by the luxurious red-cushioned, massively carved furniture of the office. Her feet actually burrowed themselves in the deep, dark blue rug. There were tapestries about the walls. She had never dreamed of any office being like this. She thought it seemed more like a palace.

"I'm a stranger to Mr. Lane, but you see, I've heard him on the air and I just wanted to—meet him."

"Who?" inquired the red lips, with pencil poised over a pad.

"A stranger," repeated Nita, taking back a little by the pertness of the girl. "But I—I am a crooner, you see."

Surely there would be some softening of the clown-like features framed by the coppery colored plastered waves. Nita had counted on some sign of friendliness, so she smiled when she said she crooned. Hadn't she read that Billy Lane had not been in the least impressed, or interested because she was a crooner?

The pad and pencil were replaced with something of finality in the drawer of the massive, hand-carved piece of furniture which served the pert person for a desk.

"Mr. Lane is pretty busy—all the time. Why don't you try coming in some other day when you're around here."

Her mascaraed lids were lowered over her impudent blue eyes as she spoke, thus conveying to Nita the hopelessness of her trying to see the famous singer.

As she turned to pass through the little gate which divided the luxurious office from the outer lobby of that floor Nita recognized the sweet, low voice of Billy Lane. The thrill of being that near to the celebrated air favorite renewed her courage and determination to see him. She would not be outdone by the clownish-looking girl. She would see Billy Lane, she determined. She selected a chair right near to the little gateway leading from the crooner's office.

Nita waited outside the office railing, going over in her mind just what she would say to the celebrity when he emerged.

When Billy Lane stepped out of the office half an hour later Nita recognized him, even as she thought how different he looked from his pictures she had admired in the radio sections of Truesdale's newspaper.

All the flattering things she had planned so carefully to say to him suddenly left her as she dashed over to where he stood with three other rakish looking fellows.

"Hello, Billy Lane!" Nita said in an excited tone of voice and held out her hand. Her freshly powdered face was one big smile.

"Oh, Hell-o, there," replied Billy giving her a proffered brief shake. "How have you been, any way?"

"Oh!" said Nita, a bit embarrassed. "You—you don't know me, but I—"

"Sure, I do. I remember you all right," Billy Lane replied. "Have you heard my new song?" He turned to his colleague companions.

They all removed their soft felt hats and brought their well-combed heads closer together and in a low, harmonious voice—it sounded like one voice they sang together so perfectly—a chorus of Billy Lane's new number filled the air.

"That's lovely," Nita managed to say after the boys had sung through something that sounded like "time o'clock."

Their faces look tight and locked up to me," Nita contributed, but she could laugh about it.

The Theater

In spite of all the sound and fury about Westerns and mystery stories being the new cinema rage, matrimonial problem dramas remain the most popular choice. Paramount has just made a be-comical as "Speedy" and it will be sure you never shall again. It is now showing at 5. A final line reads: "Coming, Coming, Coming."

James Whale has the makings of a fine picture in "Waterloo Bridge", which he directed for Universal. Kent Douglas, a sensitive, capable young actor, gets his first real chance in this film and comes through splendidly—so splendidly, in fact, that he has been given the juvenile role in support of Walter Huston in the magazine story by Olive Edens which Universal has just purchased. It's present title is "Heart and Hand", which will be changed. John Clymer has written a screen adaptation and John Huston, son of the star, has done the dialogue. Universal has also purchased the play, "Oh, Promise Me" by Howard Lindsay and Bertrand Robinson which featured Lee Tracy at the Morosco Theater in New York last season. It will be used in this year's performance.

To delve back a bit into theatrical history, "The Marriage Bed" made its debut on the Coast several years ago under auspices of

The film version will be done by Mr. Pascal who for a number of years has been a regular contributor to the movies.

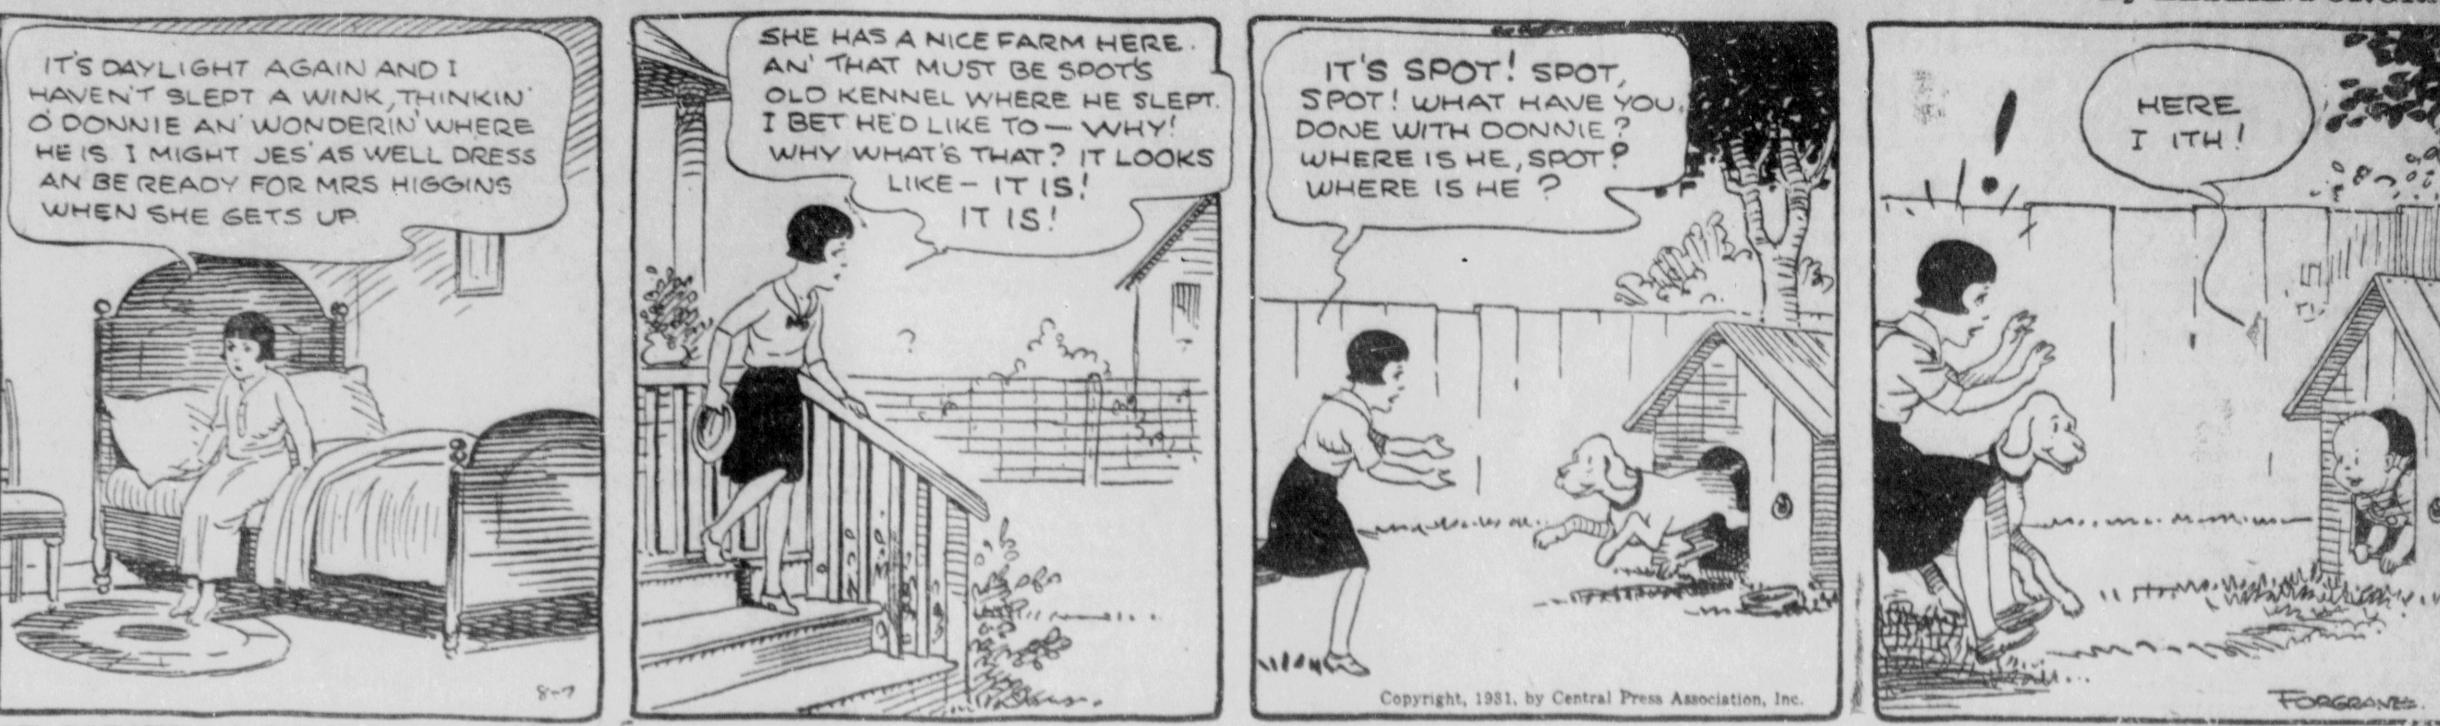

When Warners reopen in September, William Wellman will make a new start on "Safe in Hell", with a different star. This film was stopped after four days in production because studio officials decided Lillian Bond looked too much like an ingenue to play Huston Branch's heroine. The new version will find Barbara Stanwyck in the leading role with a supporting cast that will make you sit up and take notice. Among the prominent names will be Richard Bennett, J. Farrell MacDonald, Nina Mae McKinney, Ivan Simpson and Nable Johnson.

It is a final, most famous silent picture ever done by Harold Lloyd and therefore its value is needless to be commended and praised. We daresay you have never before seen any picture so

EXERCISES FOR UNVEILING OF BERRYHILL MARKER PLANNED

The program to be presented in connection with the unveiling ceremony of the S. A. R. official grave marker in memory of Alexander Berryhill, one of three Revolutionary War soldiers buried in a cemetery north of Bellbrook, Sunday, is being announced. The day's program will start with a reunion picnic dinner at the Bellbrook High School building at 12 o'clock noon.

At 3 p.m. the following program will be presented in the high school auditorium: hymn, "America the Beautiful"; scripture reading; prayer; address, "Service of the Berryhill Family in the Establishment of the American Commonwealth," Warder Crow, Michigan, a great-great grandson of Alexander

Berryhill; music, Turner brothers quartet; address, "Charles Thompson, Secretary of Continental Congress," Miss Nettie L. Rupert, Westerville, O.; hymn "Faith of Our Fathers."

The remainder of the program will be presented at the cemetery where Evelyn Berryhill, 8, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Berryhill, near Bellbrook, will unveil the marker. Official presentation of the marker will be made by Mr. Crow and Judge H. Thorne will accept the marker on behalf of the community. Congratulatory messages from S. A. R. and D. A. R. chapters will be read and the program will close with music by the Turner brothers quartet.

An opportunity will be given those who so desire to see the old Franklin Berryhill homestead, two miles south of Bellbrook, the site where Alexander Berryhill in 1815 erected a two-story, seven room log house with hand-carved mantelpiece and staircase, that was considered quite an aristocratic residence in pioneer days. There will also be a family exhibit and any one having any articles, Bibles, books, letters, photographs or anything possessed by Alexander and Rachel (Thomson) Berryhill or their children is asked to bring them for display.

DEPUTY SHERIFF KEPT BUSY BY LOST KIDS

SELF-appointed guardian of lost, strayed or stolen children was the unique role portrayed by L. A. Davis, county road patrolman at the Xenia fairgrounds on the opening day of the fair Wednesday.

Separated from relatives or friends for several hours, a little boy answering to the name of Eddie Gerald, sat down in the dense crowd of fair patrons and started to cry. Officer Davis chaperoned the youngster to the judges' stand across the race track and the boy's name was broadcast through the loud speaker system.

Not long afterward, the road patrolman returned to the stand carrying in his arms an even younger boy, similarly lost in the throng of people, who said his name was Bernard Maxwell. The broadcast plan was repeated and in both instances the children were taken to the office of the fair board secretary, where their parents found them.

Every LUCKY STRIKE is made of the finest tobacco leaves the world can offer—the finest from Turkey—the finest from Kentucky, Tennessee, Virginia, Georgia and the Carolinas—the Cream of many Crops throughout the world. But all tobacco leaves, regardless of price and kind, as nature produces them, contain harsh irritants. LUCKY STRIKE'S exclusive "TOASTING" Process—a process that mellows, that purifies, that includes the use of the modern Ultra Violet Ray—expels certain harsh irritants naturally present in every tobacco leaf. We sell these expelled irritants to manufacturers of chemical compounds, who use them as a base in making sheep-dip*, as well as a powerful spraying solution for fruits, flowers and shrubs—enough to permit the daily dipping of over 50,000 sheep or the daily spraying of many thousands of trees. Thus, you are sure these irritants, naturally present in all tobacco leaves, are not in your LUCKY STRIKE. "They're out—so they can't be in!" No wonder LUCKIES are always kind to your throat.

YOU CAN KEEP. YOUR KITCHEN Cool

At least three times a day, someone in your home spends a good many minutes in the kitchen preparing meals. To her this room is important. Sometimes it is uncomfortable. It overshadows the pleasures of summer, simply because of the oppressive heat that comes from old-fashioned ranges, particularly before dinner when she is constantly beside the range attending to her cooking.

Is her "workshop" as convenient and pleasant as you can make it? Your home is not completely modern without a modern gas range. Think how easy it is to use. Simply turn a handle . . . and you have clean concentrated cooking heat that is confined to its job of cooking. Insulated ovens keep the heat inside where it belongs. Simmering burners cook and keep cooked dishes warm without heating the kitchen. Heat, well directed, cooks quickly . . . and only a minimum of it escapes.

Gas is a valuable servant. In no appliance does it so fully assert its value as in the modern gas range. If the kitchen in your home is hot . . . if the cook in the kitchen finds cooking a burden, remember this: Gas, through a modern gas range, will modernize your kitchen and make it a happy place to work.
